Records, the way they should be sold.

Medium Format is an independent record shop in Jakarta. The name comes from film photography, where medium format is the larger negative that holds more detail. It also points to what we sell: the LP, the 12-inch, the 7-inch and the CD.

We buy records carefully and sell them everywhere our customers shop: in the shop, on the website, and on the marketplaces they already use. One platform keeps stock, orders and music in sync, so the admin stays out of the way.

The identity matches how the shop works. Plain and modern: black and white, one typeface, and a single mark drawn from a record seen side-on.

JAKARTA

BLACK & WHITE

Plain, and sure of itself.

Two things make up the brand: a plain wordmark and a quiet black-and-white system. The character is in the words we choose and the restraint we keep, not in decoration.

Plain

Clear words, clean layouts, no clutter. If something can come out, take it out.

Confident

Say things once and mean them. No hype.

Quiet

The records are the interest. The design stays in the background.

Honest

Describe what's real — the pressing, the condition, the price.

One logo, three forms.

Use the form that fits the space, and always use the supplied artwork rather than retyping the name.

The lockup — the default wherever there is room.

Wordmark

Logomark

Two versions. That's all.

The logo is black or white, nothing else.
Pick whichever gives the cleanest contrast.
There is no coloured version.

Black on light

White on dark

VERSION	VALUE
Black	#000000
White	#FFFFFF

Black on light grounds; white on dark grounds and over photography.

Give it room.

Keep a clear margin around the logo of at least X on every side, where X is the cap height of the wordmark.

Minimum clear space = X on every side. X is the cap height of the wordmark.

Nothing should sit inside this margin — not text, an image edge, or another logo.

Small, but legible.

Below these sizes the logo stops being clear. When space is tight, use the logomark on its own.

Logo lockup

Minimum width 160 px on screen, 28 mm in print.

Medium Format[®]

Wordmark

Minimum width 120 px on screen, 22 mm in print.

Logomark

Down to 24 px — favicons, avatars, app tile.

Keep contrast clear.

Use black on light grounds and white on dark ones or over photos. Avoid mid-greys that leave it half-visible.

DO Black logo on white

DO White logo on black

DO White logo on dark photo

DON'T Black logo on a dark ground

DON'T White logo on a pale ground

DON'T Any colour added to the mark

Please don't.

The artwork is final. These come up most often, and each one breaks the logo.

Also avoid cropping the mark or boxing it in.

Black on white, white on black.

That contrast is the whole palette. Keeping to it is what makes the brand feel like one thing everywhere.

Colour has one job in the product: showing the state of stock and orders. It never appears in the logo or in marketing.

A few greys for the screen.

A small set of greys between black and white for surfaces, borders and secondary text, plus the status colours.

One typeface does it all.

Noto Sans sets everything. Noto Sans Mono is for figures that must line up — prices, catalogue numbers, barcodes.

Talk like the shop.

Write the way good staff talk: clear, friendly and to the point. Indonesian and English, prices in Rupiah first.

Do

- Lead with the record and why it's worth hearing.
- Be specific about label, year and condition.
- Keep it short.

Don't

- Oversell or invent scarcity.
- Use jargon that shuts newcomers out.
- Pad sentences with filler.

WE'D SAY

"Back in stock: Khruangbin, Mordechai. A few copies on the wall — come and have a listen."

Let the records be the colour.

Pictures should feel real and unfussy: records, sleeves, the shop, hands going through a crate. Plain light, honest framing.

What to shoot

Records and sleeves, the shop, the turntable, people listening. Real moments over staged ones.

How it should look

Clean and understated. Black and white works well for the shop; let the sleeves carry the colour.

The test: would it sit happily on a record sleeve or a gig poster? If it looks like a tech advert, take it back a step.

Out in the world.

The same parts repeat across the shop, the merchandise and the screen, held together by black, white and the mark.

The online shop — black canvas, white text, cover art leading, a Now Playing bar pinned to the bottom.

Physical

Stickers, stamps, totes, tees, price tags.

Digital

Shop, back-office, POS, emails.

From brand to build.

Everything here becomes reusable design tokens, written in the DESIGN.md format so designers and AI tools can apply it directly.
