What's inside

Fifteen short sections: the name, the mark, the black-and-white system, the type, the words, and how it all comes together.

Records, the way they should be sold.

Medium Format is an independent record shop in Jakarta. The name comes from film photography, where the medium format is the larger negative that holds more detail. It also points to what we sell: the LP, the 12-inch, the 7-inch and the CD.

We buy records carefully and sell them everywhere our customers shop: in the shop, on the website, and on the marketplaces they already use. One platform sits behind all of it and keeps stock, orders and music in sync, so the admin stays out of the way.

The identity matches how the shop works. It is plain and modern: black and white, one typeface, and a single mark drawn from a record seen side-on. Nothing is loud, and nothing is added for the sake of it.

Jakarta

Black & white

Plain, and sure of itself.

Two things make up the brand: a plain wordmark and a quiet black-and-white system. The character is in the words we choose and the restraint we keep, not in decoration. Let the records and the cover art be the most interesting thing on the page.

Plain

Clear words, clean layouts, no clutter. If something can come out, take it out.

Quiet

The records are the interest. The design stays in the background and lets them lead.

Confident

Say things once and mean them. No hype, no exclamation marks doing the work.

Honest

Describe what is real: the pressing, the condition, the price. Nothing dressed up.

02

One logo, three forms.

Use the form that fits the space, and always place the supplied artwork rather than retyping the name.

The wordmark is set in Geist SemiBold. The mark is a record seen side-on, its grooves catching the light.

The lockup · the default wherever there is room.

Medium Format®

The wordmark.

The logomark · avatars, icons, stamps.

Two versions. That's all.

White on dark

Black on light

Give it room.

Keep a clear margin around the logo so nothing crowds it. The margin is at least X on every side, where X is the cap height of the wordmark.

Nothing sits inside this margin: not text, an image edge, a fold, or another logo.

Minimum clear space = X on every side. X is the cap height of the wordmark.

Small, but still legible.

Below these sizes the logo stops being clear. When space is tight, drop the wordmark and use the logomark on its own.

Keep the contrast clear.

The logo needs clear contrast with whatever sits behind it. Use black on light grounds and white on dark ones or over photos. Avoid mid-greys that leave it half-visible.

Please don't.

The artwork is final. These are the changes that come up most often, and each one breaks the logo.

Also avoid cropping the mark, putting it in a box it did not come with, or setting it faintly over a busy photo.

Black on white, white on black.

That contrast is the whole palette. Keeping to it is what makes the brand feel like one thing across the shop, the website and print.

Colour has one job in the product: showing the state of stock and orders. Those status colours are working signals only. They never appear in the logo or in marketing.

White

#FFFFFF · RGB 255 255 255

A few greys for the screen.

The platform needs a small set of greys between black and white for backgrounds, borders and secondary text, plus the status colours. The full values live in the design system.

One typeface does it all.

Geist sets everything: a clean, modern grotesque that reads well on screen and in print. Figures that must line up (prices, catalogue numbers, barcodes) use its tabular numerals, so columns stay true.

Talk like the shop.

Write the way good staff talk: clear, friendly and to the point. We work in Indonesian and English, and prices are shown in Rupiah first.

DO

- Lead with the record and why it is worth hearing.
- Be specific about the label, year and condition.
- Keep it short. One good line is plenty.

INSTEAD OF

“INSANE restock!! Don’t sleep on this absolute heater, link in bio.”

DON'T

- Oversell, or invent scarcity to push a sale.
- Use jargon that shuts newcomers out.
- Pad sentences with filler.

WE'D SAY

“Back in stock: Khruangbin, Mordechai. A few copies on the wall, come and have a listen.”

Let the records be the colour.

Pictures should feel real and unfussy: records, sleeves, the shop, hands going through a crate. Plain light and honest framing. The cover art brings the colour, so the layout around it stays neutral.

What to shoot

Records and sleeves, the shop and its shelves, the turntable, people listening. Real moments over staged ones.

How it should look

Clean and a little understated. Black and white works for the shop itself; let the sleeves carry the colour.

A simple test: would it sit happily on a record sleeve or a gig poster? If it looks like a tech advert, take it back a step.

Out in the world.

The same parts repeat across the shop, the merchandise and the screen, held together by black, white and the mark.

PHYSICAL

Stickers and stamps use the logomark. Totes and tees use the wordmark.

DIGITAL

Shop, back-office, POS, @mediumformat, emails.

From brand to build.

Everything here becomes a set of reusable design tokens for the platform, written in the DESIGN.md format so designers and AI tools can apply it directly.

Keep it plain. Let the records do the talking.

DESIGN.md	The full design system in ten sections: colour, type, buttons, cards, forms, spacing, radius, elevation, signature components, responsive.
preview.html	A live page showing every token and component, with a light/dark switch. Opens in any browser.
tokens.json	Machine-readable tokens to import into design tools and code.
tokens.css	Ready-to-use CSS variables with example component recipes.
